352 GRANTS AWARDED IN THE PAST 14 YEARS TO MORE THAN 200 YOUNG ARTISTS

Chairman's Report 2025

Last year was a very positive one for the Foundation – our most successful yet, with over 90 applications from a wide range of young artists.

Our rigorous interview and audition process, conducted by panels of experts, resulted in awards being granted to 54 of the applicants, as well as offering them mentorship and professional assistance.

That means that over the last 14 years, the Foundation has been able to award over 352 grants, valued at a total of $680,000, to 200+ young artists on the Central Coast. This is simply an amazing example of community support and investment in our young people.

With a steadfast commitment to equity and opportunity, the Foundation champions those from disadvantaged backgrounds with a strong focus on First Nations creatives.

I am delighted by the success of so many of our recipients here at home, as well as those who are studying at prestigious institutions in Europe and scoring well in international competitions. You can follow their activities and successes on our website.

Outstanding events of the year included our spectacular Showcase and Awards day, held at the Ettalong Diggers' Club in November. Susan Brooks and Janis McAloon again kindly welcomed sponsors and donors to their glorious garden property in Killcare Heights where four of our young Awardees performed and joined the guests for refreshments. Bells at Killcare sponsored a similar event featuring Heather Mitchell, fresh from giving her sublime performance in "R.B.G." at the Opera House.

Perhaps you might consider your support in the form of a Bequest or annual award named after a loved one. There is a delight in seeing young artists flourish, realise their dreams and help define the cultural landscape of tomorrow's Australia.
